Over the next many years, she has had the privilege of working with numerous non-profits, churches and city agencies focusing on urban ministry and community development. Bethany has her undergraduate degree in Urban Ministry from North Park University, her Masters of Divinity in Urban Ministry from Gordon Conwell Theological Seminary Boston, and is currently finishing her Doctorate in Church and Community Development from Bakke Graduate University. She is a member of the Christian Community Development Association (CCDA) and Communities First Association and is the executive director of the Chicago-based nonprofit Requip NFP working with churches and other nonprofit organizations towards community transformation.
